Robby Roadsteamer is back

Resurrected. Former DJ Rob Potylo says he may be down and out, but Robbie Roadsteamer is charging back.

We're in a band jam space in central Cambridge with a single space heater in the large room, and Robby Roadsteamer is doing what made him a local celebrity: profanely ranting.

He careers from topic to topic: Drew Bledsoe's ill-advised stage dive back in the 1990s, why he stole a trophy from the Boston Music Awards years ago, his love for metal band Static X, his drug use, his frustration over Boston's lack of support for the homegrown arts community.

He says many things that cannot be printed in this newspaper, all of them in a two-pack-a-day growl that would be at home at a professional wrestling match.

Roadsteamer, the alter-ego of 38-year-old comedian Rob Potylo, a radio host and artist who grew up in Danvers, began as a riff on one-time Red Sox DH Jose Canseco.

Potylo was pretending to be the ballplayer, now known for grabbing headlines for odd and often dimwitted reasons. Potylo's friends thought it was hilarious.

Now, each week, in addition tion to the online radio show he hosts at WEMF, he hosts a show in character every Friday.

Next month, his band is headlining a gig at The Middle East, in Cambridge, and he plans on performing a comedy gig as Roadsteamer.

"People have threatened to kill me, threatened to kick the [expletive] out of me," Potylo says.

Potylo is perhaps best known for his years deejaying as Roadsteamer at the now-defunct WBCN from 2005 to 2008. By the time BCN let him go, he had already phased out the Roadsteamer character, dropping the act in 2007, and looking, he said, for a chance to be himself on the stage.

From the looks of his current home, Potylo is, by any measure, eeking out an existence.

He says he earns some pocket money from producing online radio content, in addition to his iTunes residuals.

He talks about making rice in a rice cooker for breakfast. He says he rings up condoms as bananas in the self-checkout lane of a local supermarket to save money.

He pulls a similar scheme passing off curried chicken salad as potatoes at a local supermarket to save cash. "It's like 87 cents instead of seven dollars."

Despite his fall from show business heights, Potylo says he's content sleeping on the floor of a music studio.

"I'd rather be who I am 24-7 and struggle. I compare it to being a monk. I would hate relegating it to weekend warrior status. For me, man, it's do or die. It pisses everybody off. It points out the shackles of people who long ago settled."

2024. These people really don't want the Olympics to come to Hub

The Olympics? In Boston? In 2024?

Not so fast, says a group calling itself No Boston Olympics.

"It's essentially a multi-billion-dollar, three-week party for the global elite," says Conor Yunits, a co-chair of the group and a PR executive in private life, citing the games' lengthy history of cost-overruns, debt and mismanagement.

San Francisco, Los Angeles, and Washington, D.C. are also considering bids.

The Boston 2024 Executive Bid Committee includes entrepreneurs, academics and attorneys. John Fish, CEO of Suffolk Construction, is chairman. Boston Mayor Marty Walsh and outgoing Gov. Deval Patrick have expressed support for the bid. "The people of Boston have other more pressing concerns than a beach volleyball facility or velodrome," says Kelley Gossett Phillips, a No Boston Olympics leader and advocate for the homeless. "Affordable housing, child care resources

Boston 2024 says concerns about traffic congestion are overblown and promises the games won't be another budget-busting Big Dig.

The Boston Marathon shows local public infrastructure could handle the crowds, says Boston 2024.

A public meeting about the 2024 Olympics is scheduled for Monday at 7 p.m. at First Baptist Church at 633 Centre Street in Jamaica Plain.

Man found with illegal gun hoard

Police found 31 unregistered guns in Eric Dalbo's Felton Street home office, bedroom and an upper-floor storage room.

Cops discovered the arsenal while serving a Section 12 psychiatric order on Dalbo last Thursday. The order allows physicians to have police hold for up to three days a mentally ill person who might otherwise cause serious harm.

On Sunday, Dalbo was still hospitalized and guarded by police. He may be arraigned in Lynn District Court as early as Monday. Police said Dalbo was convicted in 1996 for unlawful possession of a firearm and has drug convictions dating back to 1988. METRO

Old State House gets sparkling new statues, a time capsule

Icons. Regilded animals return to their post atop city-center landmark following two-month restoration.

The lion and the unicorn are home again, shining from the top of the Old State House.

The 113-year-old duo were officially unveiled Sunday after a two-month renovation that coated them with real gold and palladium.

Their dazzling exterior wasn't all that drew curious onlookers. The Bostonian Society, stewards of the building since 1881, inserted a new time capsule into the lion, with contents proposed by the public. Conservator Robert Shure placed a new copper box inside the gilded scroll that forms the base of the lion statue.

In September, historians

Workers on a cherry picker help return the famed lion and unicorn statues to their perch atop the Old State House after a two-month restoration. / NICOLAUS CZARNECKI, METRO discovered a time capsule from the turn of the 20th century within the lion's head. It held sealed letters, photographs, and newspaper articles, and a wooden piece of the original lion statue from the 1880s.

The new time capsule includes an Apple iPhone 5 donated by Patrick LeTourneau; a 2013 Boston Marathon medal and the biography of its donor, Gregory Soutiea; tickets to the April 20, 2012, Fenway Park Centennial Boston Red Sox game; and a David Ortiz limited-edition bobblehead.

Historians included essays, letters, a photograph of former Boston Mayor Thomas Menino, who died last month, and pictures of current Mayor Martin Walsh and Gov. Deval Patrick.

Bostonians who crack open the time capsule in a century will see "a personal side of our history," said Leet. Time capsules "show a side to the city and its people that you don't always get from history books."

Alla Webster of Newton, watching the statues being readied for their perches on the east façade of the 300-year-old building, said she'd like to put an aerial photograph of the city in the capsule.

With global warming threatening coastal cities, said Webster, "the Back Bay may very well be under water in 100 years. It would be interesting for them to see how the city itself has changed."

Morning at Logan Airport involves Curt Schilling, fake grenade, naked man

East Boston. Logan International Airport had a crazy, crazy day on Saturday.

Saturday was anything but ordinary for security workers at Logan International Airport.

The action-packed day kicked off around 7 a.m. with a visit from the bomb squad after former Red Sox pitcher and ESPN analyst Curt Schilling's 12-year-old son Don accidentally brought a fake plastic grenade through a security checkpoint.

TSA personnel took the Schilling family into a private room so they could explain the goof, according to Massport, and there were no delays.

Then the day took a more serious turn.

Cameron Shenk, 26, of Boston is facing a slew of charges, including attempted murder, mayhem and assault and battery on a person over 60, for allegedly stripping naked inside a women's restroom on the upper level of Terminal C around noon.

According to police, Shenk removed his clothing, then climbed into the drop ceiling before plummeting to the floor and sustaining cuts to his head and body.

Shenk then fled from the ladies' restroom naked and bleeding, police said, and proceeded to attack an 84-year-old man. The victim sustained non-life-threatening injuries.

As police arrested him,

Curt Schilling, on his Facebook page

Shenk allegedly injured a state trooper.

Thirty minutes before the naked Shenk dropped from the ladies' room ceiling, police arrested Anton Hilton, 52, of Roxbury, at the lower level of Terminal E. Troopers responded to a report of a disturbance involving a woman screaming from inside a BMW with a broken windshield.

Hilton was allegedly driving the car before he assaulted the 21-year-old woman in the passenger seat.

He now faces charges of assault and battery as well as kidnapping. The victim refused medical treatment, police said.

Both Hilton and Shenk will be held pending release on bail or their arraignment.

Activist groups prepare immigrants for new rules

Scams. They warn that unscrupulous types might try to take advantage in the excitement.

Immigrant rights groups across the U.S., cheering President Barack Obama's move to halt deportations, are already busy advising undocumented people how to take advantage of the changes.

Gathering documents such as birth certificates and rent receipts to prove eligibility is a necessary first step, according to Community Legal Services in East Palo Alto, California.

The nonprofit organization is also warning that scam artists may try to profit from excitement before the application system is up and running, which could take months.

Another group called Michigan United plans informational sessions for immigrants in Detroit next month.

And in Texas, a new hotline from the Refugee and Immigrant Center for Education and Legal Services will soon provide as much as 45 minutes of guidance on how to navigate the process without an attorney.

Obama's executive order, the biggest reprieve for undocumented immigrants in a generation, has people who have lived clandestinely for years weighing whether to apply for protection from deportation that may not much outlast the president's time in office.

More than half of the 11.4 million undocumented immigrants currently living in the U.S. aren't eligible. BLOOMBERG

Deadline looms

Iran, powers eye extension of nuclear talks

Iran, the United States and other world powers were discussing Sunday an extension to today's deadline for a deal to resolve a 12-year standoff over Tehran's atomic ambitions, Western and Iranian officials said.

The talks in Vienna aim for an accord that could transform the Middle East, open the door to ending economic sanctions on Iran and start to bring a nation of 76 million people in from the cold after decades of hostility with the West.

But sources confirmed what officials close to the talks have been predicting privately for weeks: that a final deal is still too far off to hammer out by the deadline.

A European official said the possibility of securing a final agreement "seems physically impossible," echoing comments by Iranian officials.

The United States, Britain, France, Germany, Russia and China began the final round of talks with Iran on Tuesday.

Obama to Republican critics on immigration: 'Pass a bill'

GOP. Republicans have been divided on how to respond to the executive order.

President Barack Obama shrugged off criticism of his executive action on immigration with a challenge to House Republicans: If you don't like it, do something.

Obama was asked in an interview broadcast on Sunday about House Speaker John Boehner's assertion that he was acting like an emperor in using executive powers to tackle the issue of the 11 million immigrants living in America without documents.

"Well, my response is pass a bill," Obama said in the interview with ABC's "This Week" taped on Friday. "Congress has a responsibility to deal with these issues, and there are some things that I can't do on my Obama announced on Thursday he was easing the threat of deportation for millions of undocumented immigrants. His measures include allowing some 4.4 million people who are parents of U.S. citizens and legal permanent residents and who have been in the country for five years to remain in the country temporarily, with the right to work.

Obama cited a bipartisan immigration bill passed by the Senate last year and urged the House to take it up. Boehner has not given any indication he will act on immigration this year.

Republican Senator Ted Cruz of Texas said on "Fox

News Sunday" his party should use spending bills to withhold funds to implement the order. That could force Obama to veto vital funding bills, sparking a government shutdown similar to the one last year.

Cruz, who led that shutdown fight in an effort to block funds for the Obamacare health plan, said the big Republican gains in the midterm elections showed the shutdown was not a political blunder. Republicans will control the Senate and have a bigger House majority in the new Congress that begins in January. REUTERS

Iraqi forces said on Sunday they retook two towns north of Baghdad from Islamic State fighters, driving them from strongholds they had held for months and clearing a main road from the capital to Iran.

There was no independent confirmation that the army, Shi'ite militia and Kurdish peshmerga forces had completely retaken Jalawla and Saadiya, about 70 miles northeast of Baghdad. Many residents fled the violence long ago.

At least 23 peshmerga and militia fighters were killed and dozens were wounded in Sunday's fighting, medical and army sources said.

Iraq's Shi'ite-led government, backed by U.S.-led air strikes, has been trying to push back the Islamic State since it swept through mainly Sunni Muslim provinces of northern Iraq in June, meeting virtually no resistance. Last week, the army broke a months-long siege of the country's largest refinery north of Baghdad, but Islamic State fighters continue to take territory in the western province of Anbar. REUTERS

Western New York

Dig out begins as area braces for flooding

The area around Buffalo, New York braced on Sunday for potential flooding as warming temperatures began to melt heavy snow.

Feet of snow

Seven feet of snow fell in a record snowstorm last week. Roofs collapsed and some people were stuck in their cars for more than 24 hours when the heaviest snow fall in memory hit areas of New York state along the Great Lakes. The November storm system, dubbed the "Knife Storm," lasted for three days.

National guard

More than 650 members of the New York National Guard were in Erie County and Buffalo to help with snow removal and flood prevention, and hundreds of volunteers fanned out over the city to help dig out homes still buried in snow. Recent rain compacted high banks of snow and made it heavy to dig out.

Deaths

The storm claimed the lives of 13 people. "The focus right now is still snow removal. There's a lot of snow still on the ground and the key is to get rid of snow especially around drains so that water doesn't back up," said Eric Burr, public affairs director for the Division of Military and Naval Affairs for New York state. REUTERS

LASIK & Beyond

Taking Your Vision To The Next Level

At New England Eye Center, we truly are taking sight to the next level. Thanks to recent advances in laser and lens implant technology, our highly-trained specialists are helping patients of all ages enjoy the type of clearer, more natural vision they desire. Vision for the way we live here in New England!

From our all-laser, bladeless LASIK procedure – to exciting developments like our Visian Implantable lens – our commitment to leading edge technology is surpassed only by our dedication to personalized patient care. Patients of New England Eye Center find confidence in knowing we offer experience you can trust and technology you can rely on.

NASA-Approved LASIK - Our all-laser, bladeless LASIK at New England Eye Center has greatly improved results and helped take the fear out of having LASIK. The vast majority of our LASIK and PRK patients now achieve 20/20 vision at distance without glasses or contact lenses. Our method of LASIK is the same type approved for NASA astronauts and military pilots.

Implantable Contact Lens - New England Eye Center is among a select group of practices in the country offering patients the benefits of the Visian Implantable Collamer Lens (ICL). Unlike LASIK, the Visian corrects vision by inserting a delicate intraocular lens-like device atop the eye's natural lens, which is why the Visian is also referred to as the 'Implantable Contact Lens.' All of the refractive surgeons at New England Eye Center are qualified and experienced in performing this brief outpatient procedure to insert the Visian ICL. Because no corneal or other tissue is removed in the Visian ICL procedure, visual recovery is extremely rapid and the ICL can potentially be replaced if the eye's focus changes over time.

Refractive Lens Exchange - If you're frustrated with reading glasses and bifocals, our refractive specialists perform a procedure known as Refractive Lens Exchange. By replacing your eye's aging natural lens with a Intraocular Lens Implant customized specifically for your visual needs – and your lifestyle – allowing you to see better, look younger and never have to worry about developing cataracts!

Laser Cataract Surgery - For seniors experiencing changes in their vision – or who have been diagnosed with a cataract – New England Eye Center is turning the dream of Laser Cataract Surgery into reality. We are currently among only the top 3% of practices in the country to offer patients the added precision and accuracy of Laser Cataract Surgery using OptiMedica® Catalys™ Precision Laser System.

This year, take your vision to the NEXT LEVEL by giving yourself or a loved one the Gift of Sight. Now that's a Gift that keeps on Giving. A blessed New Year from the surgeons and staff of New England Eye Center.

The holidays have never looked brighter for New England Eye Center patients who are enjoying the 'Vision of their Dreams' thanks to our experienced eye care team.

From providing routine general eye care, to the latest breakthroughs in LASIK laser vision correction – or the recent advancements in ICL technology and Laser Cataract Surgery – our surgeons and staff are committed to making this holiday season the most joyous of all. If you're ready to enjoy the holidays with vision like you've never seen, call our office today to schedule your complimentary screening.

Russia tension. US troops to remain in the Baltics and Poland next year

The United States will keep troops in Poland and the Baltic states for at least the next year as tensions with Russia remain, the commander of U.S. land forces in Europe said on Sunday.

Several hundred U.S. troops were deployed in Poland and the three Baltic states of Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia earlier this year after Russia seized Ukraine's Crimea region in March. The deployment was part of Washington's efforts to reassure the nervous Eastern European allies that NATO would offer protection from any Russian threat.

Originally planned until the end of this year, the "persistent presence" mission of overlapping units on rotation is going to continue, Lt. Gen. Frederick Ben Hodges, Commanding General of U.S. Army Europe said in the Lithuanian capital Vilnius. "There are going to be U.S. Army forces here in Lithuania, as well as Estonia and Latvia and Poland for as long as is required to deter Russian aggression and to assure our allies." REUTERS

University of Virginia suspends fraternities in sex assault probe

Campus. About 21,000 students are enrolled at the University of Virginia.

The University of Virginia is suspending all fraternal organizations until January after a magazine article described in detail an alleged sexual assault that occurred on the campus, the school said on Saturday.

All fraternal organizations and associated social activities will shut down until Jan. 9, the beginning of the spring semester, so that students, faculty and alumni can address sexual assault and sexual violence on campus, said Teresa Sullivan, president of the prestigious state university, located in Charlottesville, about 100 miles southwest of Washington, D.C.

"I write you in great sorrow, great rage, but most importantly, with great determination," Sullivan said in her statement

Sullivan's statement did not detail what the suspension entails. School officials were not immediately available for comment.

The announcement comes three days after Rolling Stone magazine published an article that detailed the alleged sexual assault of a freshman female by seven men at a Phi Kappa Psi fraternity in 2012.

Sullivan called for anyone with information about the assault to call the Charlottesville Police Department.

The article also described the party atmosphere at the school where students are held to a standard of being "studious by day, wild by night."

Some 60 fraternity and sorority chapters, men's and women's social organizations, are located at the school and about 30 percent of students participate in a fraternal organization, according to the university. REUTERS

Gwyneth Paltrow fires back at 'jailbird' Martha Stewart

In possibly the most stuffy, Hamptons-bred move yet, Gwyneth Paltrow and Martha Stewart have apparently decided they're going to play out their ongoing feud with the WASP-iest weapon of all: Clever recipes. Last month, Stewart presented a selection of holiday pies in her magazine with the headline "Conscious Coupling," a dig at Paltrow's awkward divorce announcement. So Paltrow's camp has fired back now by posting a recipe on Goop for "Jailbird Cake," apparently a dig at Stewart's time behind bars. "The folks at Goop know how to have some fun too," a source tells People magazine. "If Martha served up the appetizer, the Jailbird Cake is just desserts." We're sure they're both home cackling over a cup of organic herbal tea.

Andy Cohen outs Kevin Spacey

Bravo honcho and "Watch What Happens Live" host Andy Cohen probably shouldn't expect Kevin Spacey on his show anytime soon, at least not since Cohen implores Spacey to come out of the closet in his new memoir, "The Andy Cohen Diaries: A Deep Look At A Shallow Year." Cohen recounts running into Spacey — who has dodged questions about his sexuality for years — at the U.S. Open in 2013. "Kevin Spacey was in front of us with what looked like a face full of makeup and three male companions who were definitely not raising any questions," Cohen writes. "I still get enraged when I think about him talking about being in love with that woman on '60 Minutes.' Come out, sir."

Natalie Dormer wants more male nudity on 'Game of Thrones'

The HBO hit "Game of Thrones" isn't known for modesty when it comes to nude scenes, but at least one of the show's stars thinks there's some imbalance in exactly what flesh is on display. Simply put, Natalie Dormer wants to see more man meat next season. "Well, during the first season, [co-stars] Alfie [Allen], Richard [Madden] and several of the men got naked — although not all the way," Dormer, who also stars in the new "Hunger Games" movie, tells The Daily Beast. "I think 'Thrones' has been better than your average show with the equality, but they could definitely ramp it up. Absolutely." Should we start a petition or something?

Take a trip with the 'Booze Traveler'

Interview. The Travel Channel's latest covers the real reason we travel — to sample all the different kinds of booze the world has to offer.

What's your dream job? Even if traveling the world learning about different national drinks isn't No. 1 on your list, it's probably on there.

Lucky for Jack Maxwell, that's just what he gets to do as host of the Travel Channel's new show, "Booze Traveler." The South Boston native has gone all over the world, from Mongolia to Peru, to learn about national drinks and customs. The resulting hour-long program begins tonight, with each episode focusing on an individual country.

In your time in Southie, did you work in any of the big bars in the neighborhood?

I worked in most of them on Broadway, but it's probably not what you think. When I was a little kid, I asked for a shoe shine box for my birthday, and I got it. So I would go into bar rooms and shine shoes until I left there at just about 13. I would listen to these guys and their

Taste test

Strange brews

What was the most unexpected drink you faced?

Spit beer in Peru was very unexpected.

What's spit beer?

Pretty much what it sounds like. The women of the tribe get together. They chew up this potato-like thing, because there are 330 varieties of potato in Peru, and they spit it into a big bowl, and then it ferments, and then you drink it. Frog in a blender was certainly unexpected.

What's frog in a blender?

I'll give you a guess, and I bet you'll be right. They skin a frog right in front of you, throw it in a blender and hit puree. And then they add molasses, moonshine and tree root for taste, and other things. And you see this frog swirling around, crunching up, and I don't want to be graphic, but, it's that.

Any other unusual drinks?

Every civilization, every culture has found alcohol and learned how to make alcohol from something. We make it from fruit, or grain or herbs, but in Mongolia they have none of that because nothing grows in the Gobi Desert. Instead, they have camels. They milk them and turn the milk into vodka.

great stories and I realized how these normal, average, everyday, blue-collar people transformed when they had a couple of cocktails. I learned about alcohol's magic socializing effect — the lubrication that it provides to help us, at least in this case, be who they wanted to be.

Had you traveled much before this?

I go to some of these places for the very first time and I have real, true experiences and reactions to that. Like most of us, before I'd go to these places, I'd have ideas in my head of what it might be like, and I was never right. Never. It was almost always more adventurous, wonderful and spectacular than I thought — or it was just different than I imagined it would be.

'Mockingjay' ever so slightly disappoints with $123M debut

"The Hunger Games: Mockingjay — Part 1" tallied $123 million in ticket sales to top weekend box office charts and score the year's biggest U.S. opening.

The third installment of the blockbuster "Hunger Games" franchise starring Jennifer Lawrence added a further $152 million at overseas box offices for a global opening weekend tally of $275 million.

"Mockingjay" took in $17 million at Thursday night showings for the year's best Thursday total, but the film fell short of industry forecasts for about $148 million through Sunday.

The first "Hunger Games" took in $152.5 million on its opening weekend in 2012, according to Boxoffice Mojo.

The latest chapter received "fresh" ratings from two-thirds of reviewers in aggregator site Rottentomatoes, while audiences gave the film an A-minus rating.

Walt Disney's animated action film "Big Hero 6" was second, with ticket sales of $20.1 million for the three days from Friday through Sunday, pushing its three-week total to $135.7 million.

Director Christopher Nolan's space adventure "Interstellar" was third with $15.1 million at U.S. and Canadian box offices. It has taken in $120.6 million since opening on Nov. 5.

Last weekend's top movie "Dumb and Dumber To" fell to fourth with $13.8 million in ticket sales. David Fincher's hit "Gone Girl" took in $2.8 million to round out the top five. REUTERS

Mike Nichols, who passed away last week at 83, was a man of diverse talents — a comic who became a theater and film director, and excelled at all three. Even the films he made were all over the place: His debut, "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" is very different from its follow-up, "The Graduate" (also on Instant). Neither are like "Heartburn," his 1986 take on Nora Ephron's scathing roman-a-clef. Meryl Streep plays an Ephron-esque food journo who watches as her power couple union with a

Carl Bernstein stand-in (Jack Nicholson) crumbles spectacularly.

When he started out, Nichols was one of the most progressive stylists in Hollywood. A couple of failed projects led to a shocking eight-year hiatus from movies, minus a Gilda Radner performance film. When he returned, with the Streep-led "Silkwood," he'd calmed down considerably; the remainder of his work was subdued, even deceptively plain. Where he really flexed his muscle was in tone. He had the right mix of humor and sensitivity to nail Ephron's funny-painful account of being suddenly single. Watch it with someone you hate.

GOSSIP MAKES EVERYONE INVOLVED A VICTIM

A friend recently criticized me for being a gossip. And while it's kinda true, is it really so bad? How can I hurt someone else if they don't know what I'm saying? And doesn't everybody do it?

Eleanor Roosevelt once said, "Great minds discuss ideas; average minds discuss events; small minds discuss people." One can only wonder what she would have made of two recent sociological studies.

One posits that two-thirds of all conversations are about other people, whether it's dishing dirt, expressing likes and dislikes or sharing personal anecdotes that make mention of others. The other suggests that gossip maintains social order by keeping people from stepping out of line — in other words, hearing about other people's mistakes helps you learn what's socially unacceptable and avoid similar missteps, like dating known cheaters or doing something that might get you fired.

Despite such studies, I can't help but agree with the late first lady. First, social conformity is overrated. Some of history's greatest artists and inventors were major rule-breakers who dared to defy the norm (think Bob Dylan and Steve Jobs).

Second, and more important, gossip does more damage than good in Taylor Swift may have gossip swirling around her all the time, but unlike the average person she also has endless ways to dispel a rumor. Or she can just write a thinly veiled song about it. / GETTY IMAGES the realm of interpersonal relationships. The Talmud, the book of Jewish biblical commentary by thousands of rabbis and the basis of Jewish law, goes so far as to suggest that when you gossip about someone, you "kill" (in a manner of speaking) three people — the person you're gossiping about, the listener and yourself.

The subject

Gossip leads people to make assumptions about a person based on limited, second-hand information that may exclude critical details about extenuating circumstances and motivations. The danger is that people may jump to erroneous or unfair conclusions about the slandered individual, who's often not given a chance to offer a rebuttal.

The listener

Hearing gossip colors how the listener views the person being discussed. One possible outcome is that the listener, taking the gossip at face value, may decide not to seek out a social or professional connection with someone they might otherwise like if they had been given the chance to form their own, unbiased opinion.

The gossipper

When you diminish another person, especially to make yourself look better, you're really demeaning yourself. Plus, people may stop trusting you with personal information. And really, can't you think of anything better to talk about?

Sure, many people indulge in gossip. Even I can't resist a juicy morsel from time to time (though it always leaves a bitter aftertaste). Yet "everybody does it" has never been a good reason to do anything. Next time you feel tempted to dish a little dirt, consider where it will land. Will it cause more harm than good? How would you feel if someone were gossiping behind your back? Then, consider Eleanor Roosevelt's quote and find something more worthwhile to discuss.

Kissing transfers 80 million bacteria

On the face of it, this doesn't seem like the most romantic fact about kissing.

Before you pucker up, keep this in mind: Smooching for 10 seconds can transfer as many as 80 million bacteria. In a recent study out of the Netherlands, researchers questioned 21 couples about their kissing behavior and frequency of intimate kissing. From there, the study subjects' mouths were swabbed, revealing that couples who kissed more frequently shared similar salivary germs.

Researchers concluded, somewhat romantically, that the more a couple kisses, the more alike they are in terms

Meditation shown to benefit breast cancer survivors

"Mind over matter" is a saying that seems to get tossed about freely about most any obstacle, whether the challenge is mental or physical. But new research is trumping up the legitimacy of the mind-body connection.

In a recent study, 88 Canadian breast cancer survivors were split up into three groups: One participated in mindfulness meditation, another took part in supportive talk therapy, and the third completed one six-hour stress management seminar.

When compared with the women in the meditation group, the others demonstrated advanced cell aging.

The researchers theorized that breast cancer survivors who practice mindfulness meditation may be reaping the benefits at a cellular level. "[Mindfulness meditation] is about being more present in the moment, rather than dwelling on the past or worrying about the future," said principal investigator Dr. Linda E. Carlson. MARIANNE HAYES

Coffee could stave off diseases linked to obesity

Most everybody is looking to lose weight. So isn't it great when a study comes along showing that something you're already doing could help?

A study done at the University of Georgia showed that drinking coffee may help protect against obesity-related diseases. The magic appears to be linked to a chemical in coffee called CGA. People with obesity are at higher risk for developing resistance to insulin and building up fat in the liver, researchers say. In the study, which used mice, CGA was found to improve these issues while also preventing weight gain.

"We're not suggesting that people start drinking a lot of coffee to protect themselves from an unhealthy lifestyle," lead author Yongjie Ma said in a statement. However, he does acknowledge that CGA is a strong antioxidant and appears to reduce inflammation. The goal is create a therapeutic form of CGA that could cut the risk of developing obesity-related diseases.

A group of selective schools want to create their own college application

Each fall, thousands of aspiring college students fill out the Common Application — a single form that allows them to apply to over 500 colleges and universities across the country. But a group of some of the most selective schools in the country are working to create their own application that they hope will attract the brightest high school seniors out there.

The Chronicle of Higher Education recently discovered that officials from Harvard, Princeton and Yale, as well as representatives from other highly selective schools, formed a committee earlier this year to create a rival to the Common Application that would help schools “enroll the very best and most diverse freshman classes they can.”

The Common Application was heavily criticized last year when users encountered several glitches and technical problems while filling out their applications.

But this new application reportedly won't be particularly common. The Chronicle notes that the current proposal would only be for private colleges with considerable financial aid budgets and public universities with high graduation rates.

The new application could be available as early as next year. LAKSHMI GANDHI

How to have a great Thanksgiving on campus

Tips. Flying solo over the holiday break doesn't need to be a downer.

For many college students, Thanksgiving is a much-needed break to head home to the comfort of family and home cooking. But if you'll be staying on campus over the break, not to worry! You can still have a fun Thanksgiving in the dorms.

The first thing that comes to mind when you think of Thanksgiving is food, naturally. It's hard to prepare a turkey with all the fixings when all you've ever attempted is microwavable dishes, so here are a few simpler recipes you'll be happy to gobble down.

Have some fun

Food is fantastic, but it tends to disappear faster than one would like. So it can't be the only thing you have on your to-do list.

1 What to watch Get yourself into the seasonal spirit with “Planes, Trains and Automobiles,” “Home for the Holidays” and, if you're feeling a little moody, “A Charlie Brown Thanksgiving.” You might find yourself thankful to have some peace and quiet far away from your family.

2 Where to go After not leaving your futon or bed during this movie marathon, it's the perfect time to sign up for a 5K run. Most areas have some version of a “Turkey Trot.” As it will get you moving and interacting with other people while burning off some of the calories you've consumed, it's a win-win.

3 Remember to give back Given the story behind Thanksgiving, this week is also a wonderful opportunity to volunteer in the community. Check in with your campus community service office to see if your school is participating in a food drive or help out at a local soup kitchen for the day.

History maker. This college freshman is about to become the youngest legislator in the United States.

While many 18-year-olds look forward to Election Day because they are able to cast their first-ever vote, the recent election was special for 18-year-old West Virginia University freshman Saira Blair because she was also looking to win a seat in the West Virginia House of Delegates.

Blair — who was born on July 11, 1996 — ran on a strictly conservative platform that was pro-guns, pro-business and anti-taxes. In a way, she's joining the family business: When she takes her oath of office in January, she will be joining her father, Craig Blair, in the House of Delegates. She will be balancing her legislative duties with her class schedule at West Virginia University, where she is studying economics and Spanish.

“I actually had a couple of geology classes this morning,” she told Politico in an interview the day after her win. “It was fine, just like any other day of class.”

The election

Blair's journey

In May, Blair had her first political victory when she beat a two-term incumbent in the Republican primary (later that month, she reached another milestone when she graduated from high school). On Election Day, she won her seat by a landslide, beating out 44-year-old Democrat Layne Diehl with more than 60 percent of the vote.

HOW TO DEAL WITH A HORRIBLE BOSS

If you're among the 84 percent of global workers who think you can do a better job than your manager, per data from a Monster survey, you're not alone. But what happens when your boss is firmly intact in his or her role and you feel stuck?

As "Horrible Bosses 2" gets released this week, we're reminded of the plethora of wretched bosses right down to Jennifer Aniston's role as a seducer boss. The good news? You're never truly trapped. Here are a few ways to get yourself out of a horrible situation.

You don't have to feel hopeless at work. / HEMERA

How to spot one

There are a few red flags during the interview that your boss will be a stinker. See if they're punctual for the interview; do they respect your time? If they don't give you their undivided attention during the interview, don't expect to ever get it later on.

Do they provide you with clarity regarding what it takes to succeed on the job? Do they demonstrate anger toward employees, even slamming doors? Ask key questions like what it takes to succeed and carefully watch behavior, nonverbal cues included.

How to ditch one

If your boss seems horrid after you're hired or if you inherit a wretched boss once you're already on the job, you have some options.

The first is to find a new job. The wrong boss can make your job and life miserable, killing your self-esteem. Look internally and externally. Your success and happiness at work ultimately point to who you work for.

Your next option? Deal with it and hope that you or your boss gets promoted or transferred. This can be torturous, though — you deserve better.

If the situation crosses the line to harassment, another option is to sue, but it's not so easy. Albert Rizzo, principal attorney for the Law Offices of Albert Rizzo, P.C., a firm practicing employment law and litigation in New York, ex-

The time is ripe to negotiate

Re: 'Immigration plan lawful, Obama says' (Metro, Nov. 21-23) Give 'em hell, Mr. President! He did what he had to do, since the Republican House was unwilling or unable to do anything. This whole sordid saga reinforces the old adage, "Those who can, do; those who can't, bitch" — which is what the Republicans will do for the rest of the year — and then some.

RICHARD ZIEGENFUSS, VIA EMAIL

President Obama wants to suspend deportations of undocumented immigrants, such as those who have children who are U.S. citizens, which seems a humanitarian thing to do. If he had acted when Democrats controlled both houses of Congress, he could have passed a comprehensive immigration bill then, so the present impasse is his own fault.

So let the Republicans allow a temporary suspension of deportations, and in exchange, Obama will OK the Keystone pipeline, roll back oppressive EPA regulations that Republicans hate, etc. In other words, Mr. President, you can't have your own way all the time, so do some negotiating.

GEORGE CHRISTIAN JR., VIA EMAIL

President Obama has carried through with his threat and issues an executive order that would shield five million undocumented immigrants. But this would create massive problems, including jeopardizing our borders. Added to that, I feel this would be an insult to immigrants who came here legally and became citizens. To bypass Congress is not the democratic way of doing things. Furthermore, President Obama should not go against Congress but should work with Congress to achieve a workable solution that would also secure our borders. This I believe would be a policy that would be right for all concerned. That truly is the American way.

Pats again look unbeatable as they rip Lions

NFL. The Patriots have won seven straight games and have blown out three straight contenders.

This 2014 Patriots season is starting to eerily resemble New England's 2003 season. In 2003, the Pats lost to the Bills on the road in Week 1 and lost to the Redskins on the road in Week 4. After the loss to Washington, the Pats went on a tear — winning 12 straight regular-season games and three straight playoff games before hoisting the Lombardi Trophy.

This season, the Pats (9-2) lost to the Dolphins on the road in Week 1 and lost to the Chiefs on the road in Week 4. Since that time, the Pats have become the odds-on favorite to become the 2014 Super Bowl champs.

The Pats crunched yet another division leader Sunday, blasting the Lions 34-9 at Gillette Stadium in a game that was never in doubt after the Pats scored 17 second-quarter points.

Six of the Patriots' wins during this seven-game win streak

NFL roundup

Scores from Week 12:

- Bengals 22, Texans 13
- Bears 21, Buccaneers 13
- Seahawks 19, Cardinals 3
- Chargers 27, Rams 24
- 49ers 17, Redskins 13
- Broncos 39, Dolphins 36

could be classified as a "blow-outs" as they've beaten the Bengals, Bills, Bears, Broncos, Colts and now Lions by at least 15 points.

The Pats will now turn their attention to another division leader in the Packers (8-3), who took over first place in the NFC North on Sunday thanks to the Pats' win over the Lions and their 24-21 win over Minnesota.

As is becoming a weekly theme, the Patriots got big performances out of players who were quiet in the game prior. In this particular week, tight end Tim Wright and newly signed running back LeGarrette Blount stepped up. Wright caught five balls and had two touchdown receptions while Blount rumbled for 78 yards on 12 carries and also found the end zone twice.

Blount effectively served as the Pats' closer Sunday, as his 33-yard run with 6:23 left in the fourth quarter closely resembled one of his huge gains in last season's divisional playoff win over Indianapolis. Blount was released by Pittsburgh early last week but turned around and signed a two-year deal with the Pats on Thursday.

Jonas Gray, who last week carried the ball 37 times for 201 yards, did not carry the ball once against Detroit. Gray missed practice Friday because he overslept.

The Patriots defense again came up huge, particularly in the red zone, as it did not allow Detroit to reach the end zone. Calvin Johnson was held to just 58 yards receiving on four catches. Detroit's running game wasn't much better as Joique Bell was limited to 48 yards on 19 carries.

MATT BURKE

Visit Metro.us to read about Michael Phelps' girlfriend fuming on Twitter.

Ashley Judd is currently the most notable celebrity college sports fan in the nation, as she's a huge Kentucky basketball honk. But make no mistake — Burt Reynolds invented the "celebrity alumni" game.

Reynolds, who once played halfback for Florida State, showed up at his alma mater Saturday to plant the symbolic "spear" at midfield ahead of FSU's narrow 20-17 win over Boston College in Tallahassee.

It shocked many people to see just how frail the 78-year-old Reynolds has become, but remember that he is a captain on a "really, they're THAT old?" team that also features Jack Nicholson (77), Vince McMahon (69) and Pete Carroll (63).

It was another strange day for FSU, as quarterback Jameis Winston shoved an official and wasn't ejected and linebacker Matthew Thomas hit BC's Josh Bordner with his helmet and was ejected. In the end, the Seminoles again found a way to win as they remain the lone undefeated team in the college football playoff picture.

The Evolution of Wikipedia

What's up with the Wikipedia hate?

It's easily the most underrated site in the history of the Internet. It gets a bum rap for being a fountain of misinformation, but I find that it's quite rare in which someone is burned. The site has drastically improved its editing measures over the years. Still, this past week in the sports world, we saw a couple episodes of Wiki-bashing.

First, ESPN analyst Keith Law got into a Twitter fight with fellow ESPNer Curt Schilling regarding evolution. Law referenced a Wikipedia article about transitional fossils and the former Sox pitcher-turned-analyst shot back with a Tweet that read, "Keith you are seriously going the Wikipedia route?" (Law was suspended from Twitter by ESPN, seemingly because of this exchange, but the Worldwide Leader says that's not the case.)

Then, on Saturday, as ESPN College GameDay broadcast from Cambridge, Massachusetts, ahead of Harvard's 31-24 win over Yale, there was a sign in the audience that garnered a good amount of attention, reading: "Yale cites Wikipedia."

Revs take first leg of Eastern Finals against New York

The Revolution couldn't have imagined a much better start to their two-part Eastern Conference Finals series against the Red Bulls.

New England won 2-1 on Sunday at Red Bull Arena. The return match is on Saturday (3 p.m., NBCSN) at Gillette Stadium with the aggregate winner advancing to the MLS Cup on Dec. 7.

Teal Bunbury opened the scoring with a tremendous strike in the 17th minute. He dribbled across the top of New York's defensive box before unleashing a vicious left-footed shot that bent around New York goalkeeper Luis Robles (two saves) and into the side netting.

Both teams had two yellow cards apiece in the first half and it was tied 1-1 at the break. The Red Bulls grew more frustrated in the second half, realizing that they were letting their home-field advantage slip away. Jermaine Jones' game-winning goal came against the run of play and after a beautiful counterattack between him and fellow star midfielder Lee Nguyen. New York dominated possession (60-40 percent). RICH SLATE
